About FIQ

Forum for Civic Initiatives is a non-governmental organization focused on philanthropy, sustainable development, as well as security and safety sector. FIQ also supports active citizenship projects and environmental protection through its Grant Program. It was established in 2000 by a small group of people, who saw the need to mobilize the citizens in decision-making processes following the 1998-1999 armed conflict in Kosovo.

Within the context of political and economic changes in Kosovo, and bearing in mind the mission to increase and strengthen the citizens' participation in decision-making, FIQ re-dimensioned its vision by including in its array of activities not only issues related to safety, security and civic participation, but also other programs, such as provision of grants and philanthropy.

“FIQ believes that the philosophy of development policies in a democratic society should reflect the inclusion of citizens in order to meet the needs of Kosovo society for a genuine civic cooperation between citizens and state.”
Dear readers, colleagues and friends!

Forum for Civic Initiatives has the satisfaction and honor to invite you to read, through programmed and developed activities in 2012, its vision, working program coherence and synergy that FIQ tries to implement through its cooperation with partners and other national regional and international actors.

While I'm writing down this message, I also need to reflect on the almost daily changes and dynamics faced by the Kosovo society, and consequently, the Forum for Civic Initiatives, as an organization representing the civil society that believes in the inclusion of citizens in policy and decision-making.

While Kosovo as a country with young institutions, but with a consolidated civil society tries to leap on its way towards strengthening, the political elite is in discord by leaving aside from the debates and important discussions true elites, be them apolitical, academic or cultural.

This is one of the key contradictions faced by FIQ in its programs drafted and implemented in 2012. FIQ is resilient and opposes the policies of clans and narrow personal interests that do not represent at all Kosovo civic society.

In 2012 numerous activities have taken place in FIQ aimed at boosting the civic activism in decision-making. Seminars held with the energy development community that FIQ carried out in conjunction with Kosovan consortium KOSID, unfolded the FIQ principles that complied with citizen's concerns on the energy situation in the country.

FIQ campaigns organized in cooperation with SAFERWORLD and Kosovo local partners add up to the value of FIQ efforts against illegal weapon holding and use within the Rule of Law Program.

The FIDES price as a FIQ value is a landmark of its work in promoting philanthropy. Awarding prices for individuals, companies or Diaspora representatives as acknowledgement of their work for communities in Kosovo serves as an incentive for and promotion of the culture of philanthropy and of giving for the sake of common good.

Dear readers, through my short message I would kindly like to invite you to read an extensive description of activities of Forum for Civic Initiatives as an important contributor for the democracy development in Kosovo.

Kindly yours,

Dajana Berisha
Executive Director
Programmatic Structure and Working Methods of FIQ

Philanthropy, Sustainable Development, Rule of Law, and Grant Program comprise the FIQ programmatic structure. While the methods of our work consist in research, analysis, advocacy, development of policies and project management.

Children Working for a Greener Environment, was one of the activities that FIQ carried out in primary schools of larger municipalities of the Republic of Kosovo, where children clad as flowers and trees collected funds for the improvement of their schoolyards.

Programs and Activities

1. PHILANTHROPY

FIQ believes that every citizen can play an important role in the development of society and encouraging others to do so. The impact of our work and of others who strive towards changes in this society, amongst others, can be seen through philanthropy and philanthropic deeds. In this regard, FIQ is working with companies and individuals who would wish to contribute to the society and to share the same values with us. Philanthropy in Kosovo needs to go through a rebirth. In this respect, FIQ is employing a two-pronged approach: (i) awareness raising on the importance of philanthropy and (ii) encouragement of companies and individuals to financially contribute that would in turn bring a sustainable development.

In July 2012, FIQ participated in the Forum for the Philanthropy Development in Western Balkans, organized by the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, in Kolasin, Montenegro, whereby ideas from all Western Balkans countries were presented, and three best ones were awarded with an amount of funds needed for the start-up of new “green” businesses.

In November 2012, within its Philanthropy Program, FIQ organized Philanthropy Week in several cities of Kosovo. During these meetings with local businesses discussions were mainly focused in identifying the possibilities of cooperation. This activity will continue in 2013 in other cities and municipalities of Kosovo.
Since its establishment, FIQ has closely worked with security and safety sector, with community safety remaining as its key focus. Except for enjoying strong support by the donor community, it continues to work with partners who have also supported our work for years and their contribution has undoubtedly impacted our joint efforts.

Through this Program, we intend to continue with the strengthening of citizens participation in decision-making and safety improvement for targeted communities. Over 2012, Rule of Law Program has carried out its activities through three projects: (i) Forum for Security, (ii) Safe Place, and (iii) Improved Public Supervision.

In cooperation with its partners, FIQ published several policy analysis; most important being: “Kosovo Police Budget; needs for additional funds and better financial planning” (FIQ and GAP); “Traffic Safety Policies” (FIQ and INDEP) and “Neighborhood Police Officer; community policing and safety, their implementation and impact in the field” (FIQ). All these analysis were followed up with round tables held in 5-7 different municipalities in Kosovo, were their content was discussed and additional recommendations given, that were addressed to relevant institutions, namely those dealing with security and safety issues.

FIQ is also continuing the tradition of awarding the FIDES award. This award strives to publicly recognize values and contributions for the common good made by companies, individuals and organized groups for the common benefit.

This solemn ceremony was attended by 300 participants from amongst the diplomatic core, local and international institutions and organizations, representatives of local and Diaspora businesses, as well as civil society and media. This award allows the associations, NGO’s and donations beneficiaries in general to publicly express their recognition for the donators. In addition, this price will also enable the beneficiaries to enjoy a wider public support for the project that they so generously supported.

2. RULE OF LAW PROGRAM
Another campaign undertaken by FIQ in cooperation with the Kosovo Police “Get to Know your Police Officer”, also began in several municipalities of Kosovo, and it will continue in the first months of 2013. Its purpose is to give first hand information to the citizens on the new working methodology of the Kosovo Police and the police officer working in their neighborhood.

Other activities carried out within the Rule of Law Program are as follows: Campaign against weapons “Time for Action /Koha për Veprim/”, which, according to information from different municipalities, was successful in decreasing the use of firearms in festivities.
3. SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

FIQ saw the need to have “green and efficient” ideas more present in the public. We believe that these ideas will bring benefits to the community and will speed up the environmental and economic development in Kosovo.

The role of society is to create independent citizens. In order for the society to move forward, sustainable ideas should be more present.

FIQ would like to assume the responsibility of facilitating, advocating and promoting this development aimed at socio-economic changes for the people and their communities.

FIQ commenced with the implementation of this Program in 2012, initially in the energy sector, as a part of Civil Society Consortium for Sustainable Development KOSID. We strive to advocate for more transparent processes in Kosovo energy sector.

FIQ, as a part of KOSID, contributed in the civil mobilization and activism, by organizing the most endangered communities from environmental pollution to tackle their problems, hosting seminars, round tables and other important activities.
